The president, it is known, will be pleased to see the name of his secretary of war at the head of the New York ticket, but it is considered doubtful if he would take any aggressive part in the selection of a gubernatorial candidate. The president will visit New York on his way to Altoona, Pa. He will leave Boston Sunday night, spending Monday in Washington. He will go to New York early Tuesday, remaining there until night and then start for Altoona to keep an engagement Wednesday with the Civil war governors association. He will leave Altoona Wednesday and arrive in Beverly early Thursday. The president told visitors today there was no ground for the report that Controller of the Currency Murray would be asked to resign.

The Colorado law permits the shooting only of deer with horns. Several hunters who were arrested last season with hornless carcasses in their possession pleaded that they shot when so far away that they could not tell whether the deer had horns or not. BASEBALL IN GRANDFATHER'S DAY

Edward Harvard Moss in Harper's Weekly. Princeton was a prominent factor in college baseball from the day the "first nine" was formed. The record shows that H. C. Millsprague succeeded L. V. Mudge as captain in 1852, in which capacity he served for two years. It was not until 1888, however, that the first of the big intercollegiate series was inaugurated. In that year a Princeton team journeyed to New Haven and was defeated 30 to 23. The captains of the rival nines were Thomas Hooker, '89, for Yale, and A. E. Van Wagner, '88, for Princeton. During the same season Harvard won the first game between the two universities by 17 to 16 tactics. A year later the University of Pennsylvania announced that its hat was in the baseball ring, and Princeton demonstrated that the Quakers had much to learn about the game by defeating the Pennsylvania team by 21 to 8 and 19 to 2. The baseball of that period bore little resemblance to the scientific play of the varsity nines of the present; but who shall say that the undergraduates did not gain as much pleasure and physical benefit from the sport as the students who make the nines today? There was none of the training and discipline in vogue now. The coach and the various protective paraphernalia were unknown, yet victory was none the less sweet or rivalry lacking. The modern and ancient players' uniforms would make an interesting and instructive comparison if placed side by side. The white knickerbocker trousers, double breasted and fastened with buttons, the knee-high stockings, the padded knickerbockers of today, the trousers were full length and were usually worn tucked into the high-laced shoes during the game. Most of the players used ordinary street shoes, although the canvas shoe, reinforced with strips of leather, was gaining in popularity. Flat caps with broad visors were affected by the members of the teams as well as occasional "side-burns," the accepted type of hair-cut of the time.

Kaufman's

Denies Motion in Steel Co. Tangle

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 16.—Judge R. B. Albertson of the King county superior court tonight decided that he had jurisdiction in the suit brought by James A. Moore, promoter of the Western Steel corporation, against the Metropolitan Trust company of New York, and denied the motion of Moore's attorney to rehear the case to the Jefferson county court where the suit was first brought. The case was transferred to King county by the trust company. The court gave Moore 10 days to answer the affidavit filed by the trust company Saturday, in which Moore is charged with securing the services of Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of the treasury, to obtain a loan of $800,000 from the Metropolitan Trust company. In the present suit, Moore seeks to regain control of the steel plant which was bought by the trust company and federal revenue sale, asks for an accounting and $1,000,000 damages from the Metropolitan Trust company. The document bears the date of the night of September 12, 24 hours previous to the taking of his life, and it indicates that the death of the countess had not been decided upon when the instrument was prepared. It says that while his wife lives the house of Nogi may be maintained, but that after her death the line will be extinct. His wife is also mentioned as a legatee of the property. Donations to friends and several public institutions are made.

Russia Formulating New Trade Treaty

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—State department officials are noting with satisfaction the launching of a movement in Russia, under governmental auspices, to arrange for a new treaty of trade and commerce between Russia and the United States. Soon after the United States had given notice that it would abrogate the treaty of 1832, the state department signified to Russia, through Ambassador Gullit, its readiness to talk about a new agreement. The Russian government let it be known that, as America has seen fit to denounce the present treaty, it was incumbent upon the United States to submit some definite proposition to form the basis of a new one. As the department was not prepared to submit such a proposition at the moment, the negotiations were allowed to lapse. The negotiations will be resumed this fall.

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1912

DAVID AND GOLIATH

A DENVER minister, addressing his congregation on the prevalence of vice in great cities, employed this expression: "Colorado is pitted against New York in this fight we must teach them a lesson and destroy their wickedness."

It is hard to believe the distinguished divine possessed a full realization of the task imposed upon the people of Colorado.

Every fifteenth person in the United States lives in Greater New York city. The census of 1910 gave Greater New York a population of 6,504,178. The United States, according to the same census, has a population of 91,972,266.

To be more specific, if the residents of Greater New York City should move to Colorado we would have about nine people in the state where we have one now.

This does not mean, however, that we should fail to give them battle in a righteous cause, but it does tend to show the actual amount of wickedness we would be obliged to combat.

It shows more than this, and explains the manifest spirit of unrest so far as our electorate in the nation is concerned.

Young men and women have been lured to cities and transformed from the directory of producers to that of consumers. A passing thought would regard this as meaningless, but let us see.

Twenty years ago government statistics furnished us the proof that we possessed a pretty well balanced nation. There was a producer for every consumer. Of course, the consumer may be a producer of talent, of labor, or of wealth—but he is not a producer of the basic elements, the food supply.

Today as a result of this exodus from the farm to the city we have one producer feeding three consumers, a little more than that, according to census figures furnished by the authorities at Washington. It is not a pleasant condition of affairs and to this unfortunate ratio can be attributed, largely, the present high cost of living.

The law of supply and demand, ordinarily inexorable and unchangeable, has been practically nullified.

The demand is so much greater than the supply that it becomes an easy matter for trusts to organize and control the supply. This control can be effected by placing surplus meats, vegetables and other commodities in cold storage and permitting them to remain there during the surplus season.

It is even hinted that these great trusts actually destroy the supply, in case it might occasionally prove excessive, so that the price cannot be lowered.

Vice is too often a creation of poverty and it might be well for our Denver friend to see what can be done in the way of removing the cause. This is usually the best plan to obtain the effect.

Fundamentally the argument can always be brought around to the "back to the soil" movement. If we had a larger number of producers—more men and women earning their bread in the sweat of their face and a less number seeking the get-rich-quick route, we would have better conditions all over the country.

CONDITIONS CHANGE

FOR the first time within the memory of men of middle age the representatives of the special interests have not found it advisable to call in the cash of the country during a presidential campaign for the purpose of influencing the election.

Perhaps this might be regarded as the forerunner of a broader independence in political affairs. It is the result of the agitation of years. The general public has no fight against a corporation, as such, but it has a fight against the corporation that goes outside of its province, as a corporation, and interposes objection and obstacle to the wishes of the people.

There is many reasons to prompt the belief that the corporations have seen the handwriting on the wall. They realize that it is impossible and unprofitable to fight public sentiment and hesitate to look brazenly into the jaws of the maddened public.

As a result conditions, financially or commercially, are normal in this campaign. A recent press dispatch from the industrial centers conveys this encouraging information:

"Orders for locomotives, freight and passenger cars placed thus far this year have exceeded orders for same period in 1911."

In eight months thirty railroads have been placed for 2,720 locomotives, 95,985 freight and 1,475 passenger cars. The orders for the same period of 1911 were for 41,426 freight cars, 1,436 passenger cars and 1,477 locomotives. For 1911 the total orders amounted to 133,117 freight cars, 2,623 passenger cars and 2,830 locomotives.

"Orders were placed in the first four months of this year for 62,464 freight cars, 1,076 passenger cars and 1,476 locomotives."

LATENT RESOURCES

IF REQUIRED twenty years of spasmodic experiment before it was determined that Steamboat Springs possessed a wonderful resource in the shape of her ability to raise high-altitude strawberries. The growers tested the market and discovered that the berries produced after others had all been picked, shipped and sold received a higher price than the early berries.

Carbondale, nearly 7,000 feet elevation, has discovered that it is the premier potato section of the world. But more than this, Carbondale and sections of Eagle county, experimenting in conjunction with the State Agricultural College, have decided that fruit can be grown in those higher sections.

Nature appears to have a way of her own in making certain varieties conform to certain climatic conditions. For instance, the Wealthy, McIntosh Red and Red Astrakan varieties of apple are known as fall apples on the Western Slope and in the lower altitudes. They will not keep solid and firm like the Johnathan and other winter varieties.

In the high altitudes it is claimed that the Wealthy and others mentioned, become winter apples. They mature early in time to avoid the early freeze and are so rigid and firm that they become good winter apples.

Colorado has many doors to the temple of her resources. The lapse of time is proving conclusively that each section appears to be calculated and adapted for some special crop.

The productive section tributary to Colorado Springs has not determined its specialty. There is every reason why tests should be made and expert advice sought for the purpose of finding out. Strawberries do well here, it is claimed. Why not investigate the matter thoroughly?

Early potatoes should prove a remarkably remunerative crop—why not find out?

The day is not far distant when the vast area surrounding Colorado Springs will be utilized for some profitable purpose. Other sections of the state have found some specialty and are specializing profitably. Why not here?

A little attention is usually paid to the basic elements of progress—that part produced by the soil. We believe the people here should exert every possible effort to determine where this pot of gold is located—it is at the foot of the rainbow somewhere and there is every reason to believe we have the rainbow right here in El Paso county.

The commercial organizations could well afford to devote some time and effort toward the development of these resources—or at least in developing an idea as to what they should represent.

FALSE ECONOMY.

From the Chicago Tribune.
A study of occupational diseases and accidents made by the New York state department of labor shows that there are 13,400,000 cases of sickness among wage earners in the United States last year. This entailed a loss in wages of more than $245,000,000.

Many of the accidents were undoubtedly the result of fatigue. Many more diseases are, however, directly ascribed to "avoidable industrial processes." Workingmen, women and children are killed and disabled by the thousands because of want of safeguards about machinery.

This is false economy. The individual employer of labor may be the gainer for the time being. But the nation will be the loser in the end. Germany has outdone all other nations in the matter of safeguarding the life and health of her workers. And as we believe, in consequence it has far less of acute and ugly poverty than one finds in the industrial centers of the United States. It has not such festering slums as we have.

When a breadwinner is killed by industry in the prime of life his orphaned children are not going to get the education which they would have, had their father lived.

What an employer has saved by not protecting the machinery which has killed the father will often be paid out with interest by the state and nation to the son in the shape of prison fare or maintenance in a lunatic asylum.

TO LIMIT CHILD LABOR.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.
A model uniform law to be recommended to all of the state legislatures has been adopted by the American Bar association. The bill was formulated by Walter George Smith of this city, and intends to prevent any child under 14 years from engaging in any sort of remunerative labor.

This seems a low limit, is much lower than some states fix, although the latter legislation does not always apply to every sort of employment. It is pointed out that Mr. Smith, who is an enthusiastic golfer, has taken young caddies out of the field, provided his measure becomes a law. This is no valid objection. Boys under 14 ought not to get as caddies. It is no small task to lug a big bag of clubs around the links and chase lost balls. Boys under 14 should be engaged in playing ball on the back lots rather than in making money.

There are a few exceptions where children of tender years must contribute to the family support under existing conditions. The remedy is to give such families public support without putting on them the burden of supporting it. It is not often that a boy or girl under 14 should be allowed to work. They should be at school or at play up to that limit.

Supersensitive Folks

By RUTH CAMERON.

People who are always suspecting other people of something or other are very hard to live with. Everyone knows that.

But aren't people who are always thinking other people are suspecting them of something or other every bit as unlivable?

Not long ago a happy family in a boarding house was broken up by the presence of one of these unhappy creatures. One of the boarders left a silk waist, which she had washed out on the line all night. In the morning it was gone. Naturally she announced the fact at the breakfast table and in her indignation dwelt on the subject at some length. Whereupon one of the other women began to think that the owner suspected her of the theft.

At first she thought it, but very soon she knew it, and knew it with such force that she actually went to the hostess, told her the other woman had accused her of stealing her waist, and insisted that the hostess should ask the other woman to apologize.

The final result was a feud which split the boarding house into hostile camps, and caused the hostess the loss of two perfectly good boarders.

Some years ago we had a maid whose chief fault was this tendency. You may think that was a minor fault for an otherwise excellent maid, but it wasn't. She was always going about with a chip of suspicion on her shoulder and we all had to walk pussy-footed lest we knock it off. She was continually suspecting us of suspecting her of lying or stealing or some other pleasing peccadillo, despite the fact that she had an exceptionally good character and we knew it, and she must have known that we knew it.

The very slightest spark would ignite the tinder of her sensitiveness. For instance, if I had misplaced some article and knew that she had swept the day before, and might have noticed it, I must not ask if she had seen it or she would immediately think I suspected her of stealing it. And believe me, she certainly could make things unpleasant, when she became suspicious of our suspicions.

One of the queerest things about these folks is that they are ready to suspect even their dearest friends of suspecting them. I once mistook a pair of silk stockings. I asked a dear friend who had been helping me straighten up the day I lost sight of them, if she could possibly remember where I put them. And yes, she actually thought I suspected her of taking them.

Do you know, I think such an attitude is an insult. You wouldn't suspect your friend of stealing, would you? Then why impute such base suspicions to him?

I wonder if such people think they are abiding by the rule of "do as you'd be done by." It doesn't seem to me that they are.

TIME

BY GEORGE FITCH.
Author of "At Good Old Siwash"

Time consists of minutes, hours, days and years, of which a certain unknown amount are deposited to each person's account when he is born, and on which account said person proceeds to draw with the careful frugality of an intemperate sailor celebrating his return from a two years' voyage in a lumber schooner.

Time is much more valuable than money, because when it runs out there isn't any more. whereas in these prosperous days a man may fall in business, lose his money and still die with all the modern conveniences.

The average man only has 35 years of time. He spends his first year squalling, the next year crawling, the next 15 basing and the next four chasing knowledge around a college campus and trying to catch it with a hat which has a band on it that is louder than Sousa's.

In the matter of time almost everyone is rich but millionaires. Many a poor man can take 24 hours of time and go fishing with it in 10 minutes' notice, whereas many a millionaire has to dictate with his fingers while an attendant is feeding him lunch in order to keep $1,875 worth of time from being entirely wasted.

Some people are very careful of their time and spend it in reading good books, helping the poor family down the street, soaking in the beauties of nature and making their families happy.

Others criminally carelessly that they will waste 24 hours of time in accumulating a handful of suspicious wealth, a few indolent and a ruined direction.

Many a man works frantically for 40 years in order that he may have the rest of his time to himself and then finds that his account is overdrawn and the undertaker is, at that minute turning the corner into his street on two wheels.

On the other hand many carefree people spend their first 40 years of time in enjoyable pursuits and arrive at the has been case with no income—after which they have to consume another 30 years for which they have no possible use.

Time is of varying values. A second of time is nothing at all at a summer resort, but it is worth millions when a man is running away from a bear. On the other hand, 10 years spent in pounding stones is only worth a few dollars to the owner and would be readily traded for 15 uninterrupted minutes in a National bank.

Most spends one-third of his time sleeping and another third working. Out of the last third he must dress and feed himself, wait for street cars, listen to insurance agents, wait his turn at the barber's and chauffeur the furnace. If a man has one hour a day for rest and pleasure he is a favorite of fortune, and should not complain. With an hour a day a man could learn ten languages, read 10,000 books, become proficient on the violin, get a doctor's degree in philosophy, or become a Sambo with bulging muscles. But most of us spend our spare hours waiting for chairs. The consumption of chairs is becoming more frightful every day.

SPEAKING OF POTATOES AND VEGETABLES.—From the Pink Sheet.

A number of special songs were sung by a quartet and the music was furnished by an orchestra of 25 pieces.

From the Chicago Tribune.
A study of occupational diseases and accidents made by the New York state department of labor shows that there are 13,400,000 cases of sickness among wage earners in the United States last year. This entailed a loss in wages of more than $245,000,000.

Many of the accidents were undoubtedly the result of fatigue. Many more diseases are, however, directly ascribed to "avoidable industrial processes." Workingmen, women and children are killed and disabled by the thousands because of want of safeguards about machinery.

This is false economy. The individual employer of labor may be the gainer for the time being. But the nation will be the loser in the end. Germany has outdone all other nations in the matter of safeguarding the life and health of her workers. And as we believe, in consequence it has far less of acute and ugly poverty than one finds in the industrial centers of the United States. It has not such festering slums as we have.

When a breadwinner is killed by industry in the prime of life his orphaned children are not going to get the education which they would have, had their father lived.

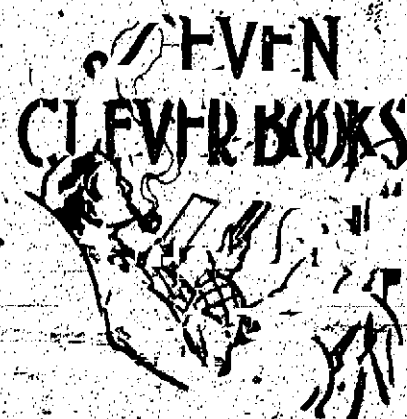

What an employer has saved by not protecting the machinery which has killed the father will often be paid out with interest by the state and nation to the son in the shape of prison fare or maintenance in a lunatic asylum.

TO LIMIT CHILD LABOR.

From the Philadelphia Inquirer.

A model uniform law to be recommended to all of the state legislatures has been adopted by the American Bar association. The bill was formulated by Walter George Smith of this city, and intends to prevent any child under 14 years from engaging in any sort of remunerative labor.

This seems a low limit, is much lower than some states fix, although the latter legislation does not

NO. 3 "BLUEBEARD"

The story of Bluebeard owes its celebrity to Charles Perrault, who first introduced it into literature. In his "Contes de ma Mere L'Oie." The story, briefly, is that Bluebeard, so called because his beard was blue, married Fatima, and shortly afterward started on a journey, leaving his bride all the keys of the castle, with strict injunctions not to open a certain closet. Curiosity overcame her and she discovered in the closet the corpses of six women whom the monster had previously murdered, and disposed of. Bluebeard, on his return, discovers her disobedience, the key having fallen on the bloody floor and all efforts to wash it were fruitless.

Perrault appears to have blended the old Breton legend of St. Trophimus with the legends concerning Gilles de Laval, Baron de Rais, or Retz (1404-40), who was popularly known as Bluebeard. In one of the Morbihan churches is a series of six frescoes, assigned to the Thirteenth century, which represents first, the saint's marriage with a Breton lord; second, her receipt of the keys from her husband; third, her discovery of seven dead bodies; fourth, her husband's return; fifth, the saint at her prayers with her sister at the window; and in the last picture the saint has been hanged, but St. Gilles is resuscitating her while her two brothers kill the husband.

The frescoes go to prove that this story (which the Bluebeard element left out) was current in Brittany long before the birth of Gilles de Rais. That nobleman, who became marshal of France at the age of 25, was a contemporary of Joan of Arc, was one of her most ardent supporters, and remained by her side until the repulse at Porte St. Honoré. In 1332, he withdrew to his estates, where his wealth enabled him to prosecute his favorite studies of alchemy and magic. He was finally found guilty of murdering a number of people, was tried by the Bishop of Nantes and was burned at the stake.

Numerous legends have been crystallized about his memory, but it is uncertain whether his identification with the hero of a forbidden room story had been accomplished before Perrault's times. His beard seems really to have had a bluish-black tinge, which was intensified by the popular imagination and given a diabolical origin.

Bluebeard, with his seven wives was a favorite figure in the mediaeval puppet show, and his name grew to be a synonym for an unnatural husband. Thus Henry VIII survives under this name in the popular superstitions of England.

Comparative mythologists have sought to connect Bluebeard with the Egyptian god Bes, a god of destruction and death who is represented with a blue beard. The two brothers of Fatima have been identified with Castor and Pollux and with the twin Asvins.

But the central idea of Bluebeard's story, that of a forbidden apartment which is death or other punishment to enter, is undoubtedly of great antiquity, and in one form or another reappears in the folk lore of all nations. In the story of the Third Caliph, for instance, in the "Arabian Nights," the hero has intruded to him all the keys of a castle with injunctions not to open a certain apartment. He gratifies his curiosity and is punished by the loss of an eye. In Germany there are several popular stories which are based on this prohibition.

In literature Perrault's story has been made the basis of a serio-comic drama, a comedy, and an opera-bouffe.

TOMORROW—"RIP VAN WINKLE."

From a Consular Report.
The tree designated by Dr. L. Traub, director of the Algerian Government Botanical Bureau, as the Sapindus utilis (soap nut tree), was first planted in Algeria at the government nursery at Algiers in 1845. In 1859 cuttings were offered for sale under the name of Sapindus utilis, and all the soap-nut trees grown in Algeria have been derived directly or indirectly from the Sapindus tree planted in 1845, which was probably of Asiatic origin, as the Sapindus grows wild in different parts of Asia, and its nuts have been used instead of soap in China and Japan for centuries. The Sapindus utilis of Algeria resembles more closely the Sapindus mukorossi grown in China and Japan than any other variety of Sapindus, but the nuts of the Sapindus utilis contain a much higher proportion of saponin. According to the analysis of the Paris chemist, M. Meurier, the shells of the nut contain 2.75 per cent saponin, whereas the shells of the Sapindus of the orient contain only 14.5 per cent. The Sapindus nuts from India, although far inferior in quality, are sold in Europe, as they are considerably cheaper than nuts grown in Algeria.

Labor is so cheap in India that it is profitable to gather the nuts from wild trees. The Sapindus utilis of Algeria is a much more valuable tree than any other variety, and it is unlikely that the cultivation of any other variety in the United States would be as profitable.

The government of Algeria encouraged the cultivation of the Sapindus for a number of years. In a pamphlet published in 1895 and republished in 1898, Dr. Traub states that the cultivation of this tree has more colorists who possess good land and are willing to wait some years for a remunerative crop. The results obtained in Algeria, have been used at length with Dr. Traub, who attributes the considerable decrease in the prices paid for Sapindus nuts during the last eight years to increased production and lack of enterprise in introducing and pushing their sale in Europe. He believes that the prices paid for Panama wood will continue to rise as the forests are being depleted and the tree is not cultivated and that saponin obtained from the Sapindus of Algeria should prove a satisfactory substitute.

When the bacteriologist wants to grow a large family of germs—he calls it a colony—he puts some of them into a sterilized preparation which hardens. There is then no chance for their moving around. So each little germ settles down to itself and begins to break in two, and then each of those pieces into two other pieces and so on, until the family becomes as numberless as the sands of the seashore. When he wants to take the census of the germ population of a given colony, he puts them into a sterilized fluid, adds 30 times as much more fluid, and then 30 times as much more, and so on until there are so many drops of fluid that each can have only a few germs in it. Then he puts one drop under the microscope, and counts the inhabitants in it. By the reverse process he is able then to calculate mathematically how many germs were in the entire colony.

In a well equipped laboratory there are germs of all kinds. There is a great mass of matter on a slice of Irish potato. It represents a million of tuberculosis germs, each one of which may be seen with the high-powered microscope the doctor uses. Here is a row of little tubes with cotton stoppers. Each of them contains typhoid germs enough to start a big epidemic. Here are some tubes containing tetanus germs, which under a microscope, look like little drumsticks, and the poison or toxin they generate is so powerful that the eightieth part of a single grain of it will kill a horse, a poison that makes the venom of the rattlesnake seem harmless in comparison.

A Thousand Kinds of Germs.
There, mounted on a slide, in a slice of paraffin so thin that one might stack up ten thousand of them in a pile an inch high, are a lot of little colored bodies taken from the spinal cord of a dog. They are called Negri bodies, from the name of their discoverer, and when those little specks are visible under the microscope you may be sure the dog had hydrophobia. If you do not believe it, put some of it into a mouse or a guinea pig and see how certainly it will go mad. Then here are tubes of measles germs, typhus germs, malarial germs, pneumonic germs, a thousand different kinds of germs, and the doctor always has methods of proving that what his eyes tell him is right.

In studying microbes the laboratory expert must have infinite patience. He must have the touch of an artist, the imagination of a poet, the hard sense of the farmer, the passion for exactitude of the mathematician, the tenacity of a bulldog, and the open-mindedness of the man who accepts nothing as proved until it cannot be explained in any other way. He must make the most painstaking measurements, keep his instruments absolutely sterile, try every theory he advances with the acid test of practical application, and make as sure as it is humanly possible that his reasoning is correct.

What the study of microbes has brought to the human race in the way of better health and longer lives is inestimable. Aseptic surgery has saved its tens of thousands in peace and in war, both by preventing blood poisoning and the like, and by making possible operations that otherwise could not have been undertaken. Since Koch delivered the germ of tuberculosis the death rate from the white plague has been cut in twain. Typhoid, diphtheria, yellow fever, a hundred diseases of man and animals have been robbed of their worst terrors, and all that is now needed is the acceptance by the people of the knowledge that the laboratory has gleaned about germs and their ways, and a nation-wide and unrelenting warfare on the bad ones, with medical fraternity to captain the fight.

Investigation Still Going On.
Much will be heard at the International Congress of Hygiene and Bacteriology about what the world has been doing during the past five years in its efforts completely to master the microbes. There are scientists everywhere engaged in efforts to run down new microbes, and this now is a fight largely to prove the existence of germs that are too small to be seen even with the most powerful microscope. For instance, nothing is better proved than the existence of the germ of yellow fever, and yet it is too small to be seen even with the microscope-eyes of the laboratory. The same is true of measles. The laboratory expert is able to inoculate monkeys with the microbes, but he cannot see them. The same is true of rabies. Malignant tumors have been transmitted by the invisible microbes, and typhus fever may be reproduced in the laboratory in monkeys, although the microbes

BIG SPRINGS DELEGATION AT CALHAN NEXT FRIDAY

Colorado Springs will grasp the hand of eastern El Paso county in friendly relations and in congratulation over the success of this year's crops at the annual county fair which is to be held at Calhan, beginning tomorrow.

A special committee of the Chamber of Commerce, consisting of Frank E. Wolff, chairman, Taylor Thompson, W. R. McCoy, L. M. Hunt and Fred A. Sperry, has been appointed to make arrangements for the excursion and to see that Colorado Springs is well represented on the excursion.

The excursion will be open not only to members of the Chamber of Commerce, but to all residents who are interested in making the visit to eastern El Paso county and in learning what has been produced in that section this year.

In addition to those who will go by train, there will be a large automobile delegation, as the roads, by way of the Lincoln highway, are reported in good condition.

Last year 150 people from this city took part in the excursion, and it is believed that the number will be largely increased this year.

NOTICE

The Board of County Commissioners of El Paso county, Colorado, will sit as a board of equalization for the adjustment and equalization among the several taxpayers on Tuesday, September 17, 1912, and will continue in session for five days.

By order of the board:
ELROY C. SHELLEN, County Clerk.
By HENRY McALLISTER, Deputy.

Burris Issues

Statement on El Paso Meeting

With regard to the recent meeting of the stockholders of the El Paso Consolidated Gold Mining company, President Allen L. Burris, president and general manager of the company, has issued the following statement to the stockholders:

The changing of the par value of the share of this company from $1.00 to $5.00 was acted upon with a vote of 1,588,967 for the same, and opposing 67,500 by James F. Burris in person plus 27,112 through James F. Burris by proxy, the said gentleman voting 34,612 against all resolutions presented. With this exception the meeting was harmonious and unanimous in its approval of the acts of its officers and directors in carrying out the plans outlined by our financial agents, Messrs. Joseph Walker & Sons, 20 Broad street, New York, that a broader and more comprehensive market be established for shareholders of this company.

The stockholders are hereby requested to immediately forward your $1.00 par share certificates you now hold, for which negotiable receipts will be promptly issued, to either the company's main office, 214-Sequoyia building, Denver, Colorado, or to its eastern transfer agents, the Registrar and Transfer company, 22 Nassau street, New York city, that the new issue of $5.00 par shares may be perfected.

Messrs. Joseph Walker & Sons, the financial agents of the El Paso company in New York, will buy or sell any fractional shares required to perfect the conversion.

The transfer from the $1.00 to $5.00 certificates will be perfected without any expense to the individual stockholder.

The new directors elected were Wm. W. Grant and Horace Heath, both of Denver, Colorado, to complete the board of nine members.

At 2:30 p. m. following the special meeting of the stockholders, a directors' meeting was called by the president, the chairman of the board, Chas. M. Heberton, presiding, and a dividend was declared by the directors as follows: $5.00 per share on the $5.00 par value issue, payable October 31, 1912, the books closing for transfer for the purpose of the dividend, on the 21st day of October.

With this dividend No. 35 the dividend disbursement of this company will total $1,587,986.00. Including the December dividend the dividend disbursement of this company during the current year totals $1,587,986.00.

The cash balance on this date is approximately $150,000.00.

In view of the fact that only since the month of May the company's production has been allowed below the former water level, the above results are most gratifying.

The net mill returns, including royalties received from lessees, for the months of July and August will average $45,000.00 each month.

SPRINGS FIREMEN WILL TAKE IN BIG CONVENTION

Chief McCartin and Other Officers to Obtain Ideas From National Association in Denver

More than a thousand fire chiefs and fire engineers from all parts of the United States and Canada are to be officially invited to visit the Pikea Peak region the last of this week, following the second annual meeting of the International Association of Fire Engineers, which opens in Denver today. Chief McCartin will bear an invitation from Mayor Avery addressed to the president of the association, W. H. Lawler, urging the body to spend a day or so looking over Colorado's playground.

Chief McCartin left last night to attend the convention, and Assistant Chief Donahue, the four captains and members of the department will attend sessions to get in touch with the modern fire-fighting methods that will be illustrated. The Denver department has arranged an exhibition run with the aid of which a huge electric fireman with a brightly lighted hose is displayed on the streets, and every variety of fire apparatus is on exhibition.

Purcell Commended for Bringing the K. C. Here

From a publicity point of view one of the biggest events which took place in Colorado Springs this summer was the Knights of Columbus convention. Since that meeting, which was held the first week in August, hundreds of clippings from nearly every paper in the United States have been received, in all of which Colorado Springs is prominently featured. Reaching the province of this convention from an advertising point of view, the committee on advertising of the Chamber of Commerce at a recent meeting passed a vote of thanks to Mr. W. Purcell, through whose efforts largely the meeting of the supreme council was brought to Colorado Springs. The resolution commends Mr. Purcell for his zeal and energy in bringing the supreme council of the Knights of Columbus to Colorado Springs and for his untiring efforts in earlier for and entertaining the delegates and the many hundreds of guests who accompanied them to this convention, every one of which went to the singing the praises of the Pikea Peak region.

W. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., is telling his friends and neighbors of his return to health and strength by the use of Foley Kidney Pills, and he says he wants others to benefit also. "I was so crippled with rheumatism I could not dress without help and had kidney trouble for years. I started using Foley Kidney Pills and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night, and though 39 years old can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the man of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." The Robinson Drug Co.

TWO BLIND STUDENTS ENROLLED AT COLLEGE

The first two blind students in the history of Colorado colleges are enrolled at the University of Colorado. They are Leslie B. Blades of 345 East Costilla street, a graduate of the State School for the Deaf and Blind in last year's class, and Miss Emma M. A. who is a graduate of the state institution. The enrollment of these students is something of a record in educational circles not devoted to special training along this line, and their progress is being watched with considerable interest.

Both are exceptionally bright, and have remarkable memories. They took honors at their school last year, and will study a regular bachelor's course at Colorado college. They will assist each other and also will be assisted by relatives.

Yesterday the autumn colors were further carried out by masses of red and yellow dahlias and brown-eyed hydrangeas. In addition to many exquisite millinery creations from the most exclusive New York and Paris houses, Miss Hamilton is showing several new ideas of her own. Miss Hamilton, who is an artist in her line, will show only the most approved styles and will continue to display the latest styles in millinery.

Captain Robert F. Scott is to make another dash for the South pole, according to an announcement made by Sir Clement Markham, the veteran explorer. Sir Clement said that Captain Scott has resolved to make the journey overland, from his ship to the pole on foot. The distance of 1,200 miles there and back over the ice glaciers to be covered by himself and his men dragging their own baggage. Sir Clement concluded his announcement by saying: "No journey ever made with dogs could approach the height of the conception realized when a party of men goes forth to face hardships, dangers and difficulties with their own unaided efforts and succeed in solving some problem of the great unknown."

COLORADO GIVEN STRONG BOOST

PRESIDENT BUSH OF D. & R. G. IN LONDON TIMES

Tells of State's Great Mineral Wealth and Agricultural Resources

In a recent special issue of The London Times on American railways there was printed a lengthy article reviewing Colorado and the splendid natural resources of the state. All except a small part of this article was prepared and written by President R. Bush of the Denver & Rio Grande and Missouri Pacific-Mountain systems. The newspaper commentary of the Times which is described, the amount as it appeared in the great London journal, is as follows:

The length of the state of Colorado from east to west is 350 miles and its breadth from north to south is 250 miles. The western part of Colorado only is mountain country. Eastern Colorado is developing, with the aid of irrigation, into one of the finest agricultural districts. There are over 20,000 miles of irrigating canals and ditches in the state, and new works are being inaugurated each season.

Agriculture.

The agricultural wealth of Colorado, however, is far in excess of its nominal wealth for which it is so well known. In 1900 she produced 15,000,000 bushels of wheat, 10,000,000 bushels of hay and about 20,000,000 pounds of wool. Her Orchard and Rocky Ford cantaloupes are sold to the United States, and her peaches and potatoes are equal to those grown anywhere. Fruits of various kinds and vegetables attain their finest growth in her soil during the closing six months of the year 1911 there were fewer than 5,000,000 pounds of fruits and farm products shipped out of Colorado from stations on the Denver & Rio Grande railroad. The total value of the agricultural product of the state, including live stock, is about $30,000,000.

The whole Arkansas Valley and the country east of the mountains is being rapidly settled by farmers, and by means of dry farming and irrigation they are producing remarkable crops. Around Greeley, Huerfano, and Colorado, are raised the principal potato and sugar beet farms of the state. Five or six large sugar plants operate in this territory. In the country around Pagosa Springs, in southern Colorado, and in northern New Mexico are raised such high quality products as alfalfa, hay, and other farm products.

First among the characteristics of Colorado railroads must be mentioned the Denver & Rio Grande. It runs from the north and south line of that company from Denver to Trinidad (about 100 miles) and in your mind, continue it for the short remaining distance to the border of New Mexico, and then draw an imaginary line from Denver westward to Utah, between these two lines and the boundary of these two states you will find a vast territory in Colorado honey-combed by Denver & Rio Grande tracks. This leaves in the state outside of this road's territory only a strip off the north and that part which lies east of the mountains. In the north the principal section from a railroad route standpoint, is held by the Denver & Rio Grande railroad, the potato and farming country, about Greeley, which is tapped by the Union Pacific, Colorado & Southern and Burlington roads.

In the territory east of the Rocky Mountains, once supposed to be a desert plain, there are big fruit, gardening and farming interests along the Arkansas Valley, where the country has been made a garden spot through irrigation. This is traversed by the Missouri Pacific and Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe. Outside of these two sections the Denver & Rio Grande reaches almost every part of Colorado, where there is any great amount of business to be obtained by a railroad.

The various mining camps and mining sections are reached by its rails, and all of the orchard, farming and live stock valleys between the mountain ranges are touched by tracks of this road. The scenery along a great part of the lines of the Denver & Rio Grande is especially grand, for which reason it gets a very large share of the first-class transcontinental travel. In several places the building of the road involved extraordinary engineering difficulties, the roadway being cut out of canon walls which rise perpendicularly out of the river. The Denver & Rio Grande system (including what was the Rio Grande Western) owns now 2,350 miles of main line. In addition it owns two-thirds of the $15,000,000 of capital stock of the Western Pacific railway, which it connects at Salt Lake City, and it has a direct line to San Francisco and the coast. A large and permanently controlling interest in the Denver & Rio Grande is in turn held on behalf of the Missouri Pacific, which connects with it at Pueblo, Colorado. The lines of the associated companies therefore, constitute a complete through route from the Pacific coast to the Mississippi river.

Other Colorado Railroads.

The main line of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe enters Colorado from the east, not far from the southern border, runs westward as far as La Junta, and then swings to the south, passing out into New Mexico. From La Junta, however, another line goes northward through Pueblo and Colorado Springs to Denver, with several minor branches, including one to Canon City. The Union Pacific reaches Denver on two different lines. One enters the state from Kansas at its center and passes on to Denver in a northwesterly direction. The other comes from Nebraska into the extreme northeastern corner of the state, hugging the shores of the South Platte river and taking a southeasterly course to Denver. The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific gets into Colorado from the northern part of Kansas, the line splitting at Lamar. One fork reaches Denver, while the other goes to Colorado Springs. The Colorado Midland extends from Colorado Springs northward to New Castle, and from there to Aspen, Arkansas Junction, Leadville and Carbondale to Spring Gulch. It passes through the fruit-growing country along the western part of its line and through the Midland Terminal company, gets into the old gold fields at Victor and Cripple Creek. The Colorado & Southern, which is controlled by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, runs from Cheyenne, Wyoming, almost due south to Trinidad, thence across the state into New Mexico. It has branches from Denver to Leadville and from Denver to Huerfano. It passes through the rich Greeley potato and farming districts, and also reaches some of the mining region. The lines of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy itself enter the northern section of Colorado from Nebraska and pass across the northern part of the state to Denver. Another line of the same railroad enters from Nebraska and cuts across the extreme northeastern corner of the state on its way to Cheyenne, Wyo.

Denver and Other Towns.

Denver, the capital of Colorado, once a wild and stormy mining camp, is now the largest city in the United States between Kansas City and the Pacific coast, with a population of 213,351. Its population in 1900 was 133,572, which shows a gain of 59 per cent in that decade.

Denver is one of the most beautiful cities on the continent and is developing an attractive system of parks and boulevards. The city, which is on a high plateau, lies 12 miles east of the foothills of the Rocky Mountains. It has an altitude of one mile above sea level, and the view of the surrounding country is beautiful. Pike's Peak, off in the distance is so plainly visible that it seems at times in the clear atmosphere of Colorado to be not an over-long walk away, much, according to stories which are told, to the discomfort of many visitors. The city is a popular center for tourists who come to see the Rocky Mountains and the scenery of Colorado, while it is also famous as a health resort, especially for tuberculous subjects. Ten railroads enter the city and it is a big wholesale and jobbing center, the jobbing trade last year being estimated at $1,314,000,000, of which $12,000,000 came from groceries. Denver is also the center of the Colorado mining in-

Butry and an important live stock market. Manufacturing industries are developing and the total value of the output of Denver's factories in 1911 is given as $37,000,000. It produces iron, shoes, woolen and cotton goods, glass, paper and other articles. Four smelters are located in this city, and it has two railroad shops.

Next to Denver, Pueblo, with 44,325 inhabitants, is the largest city in Colorado, being 120 miles due south of the capital. The census showed that it gained nearly 60 per cent in population between the years of 1900 and 1910. Besides being an important railroad center and a jobbing and manufacturing point, here is situated the biggest steel plant west of Chicago, that of the Colorado Fuel & Iron company, which employs about 5,000 men and has an annual payroll of $2,000,000. Pueblo has smelters which employ 1,000 men and whose payroll reaches approximately $1,000,000 annually. Brick plants and packing houses are among its other industries. The annual output of its factories is valued close to $30,000,000.

Colorado Springs, with a population of 29,954, lies between Denver and Pueblo. It is the headquarters of the "Cripple Creek" gold mining district, besides being a charming and fashionable health resort.

Thousands of germs have been found and their life histories written as accurately as are the life histories of chickens and sheep, but the bacteriologist, having reached the limit of the power of his microscope, has set to work to locate others by circumstantial evidence. He has succeeded in proving the existence of some that cannot be seen, and he hopes to add a long list of others, and incidentally to gain new insight to mysterious diseases.

ANNUAL FOOTBALL
RUSH OF CLASSES
BE HELD FRIDAY

The all-star Chinese baseball team from Honolulu, which is touring the United States at this time, is to clash with the Zoos in this city within the next two weeks, according to plans announced by Manager W. W. Gall. No definite word has been received as to what date the Chinese ball tossers will be here but it will be either next Sunday or the week following.

Alderman Coughlin, owner of the Zoos, has decided that fans in Colorado Springs will appreciate baseball at least three weeks longer and will arrange games for that length of time. The game which was scheduled for Sunday afternoon between the Zoos and the Robbings was postponed on account of the weather and the game between the Elks and the Union Labor league, scheduled last Saturday, was also postponed for the same reason. The Elks-Labor league game which is to be played for a charitable purpose will be played Saturday.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 16.—The luck of the draw in the drafts of the major leagues from minor league clubs fell with the American league at today's session of the National Baseball commission. President Ban Johnson's aggregation getting 20 out of the 32 drafted players among the class AA and class A leagues.

Player Schank, of the Buffalo club, who was awarded to the Philadelphia Americans, was by far the most sought for player, in different clubs voting in drafts for him.

In point of numbers, the St. Louis Americans proved the most fortunate, obtaining six men. The Chicago Nationals came next with five men.

When the drawing began there was $524,900 in the hands of Secretary Bruce of the National commission to cover the payment of drafts. Of this figure the Chicago National league club ranked the highest, laying itself liable to pay out $73,050, while the Boston Americans took the smallest chance, that of $2,500.

After announcing that the rules and schedule for the world's championship series would not be announced until the big league pennant winners had been definitely decided, the commission adjourned.

The following drafts from the Pacific Coast league were allowed:

Los Angeles—Leverenz, by St. Louis Americans.

Oakland—Patterson, by St. Louis Americans.

Portland—Klawitter, by Detroit Americans.

San Francisco—Gideau, by Philadelphia Americans.

Vernon—Agnew, by St. Louis Americans.

Sacramento—Orr, by Philadelphia Americans.

Drafts from the Western league were as follows:

Denver—Beall, by Cleveland.

Omaha—Hart, by Detroit.

Lincoln—Berghimer, by Chicago Nationals.

Des Moines—Kores, by Chicago Nationals.

Other miscellaneous drafts allowed by the commission from various clubs in leagues other than Class AA and Class A were:

Seattle—Strand, by Boston Nationals.

Waco—Taft, by Philadelphia Americans.

Port Worth—Russell, by Chicago Americans.

Ottawa—Schwind, by Chicago Nationals.

Tacoma—L. A. Long, by Philadelphia Americans.

San Antonio—Meitz, by Boston Nationals.

Seattle—Meikle, by St. Louis Americans.

Ogden—Williams, by St. Louis Nationals.

In the list of players whose selection was set aside because of their release to major league clubs under agreement approved by the commission, is Stone, by Ogden, to St. Louis.

The following is a list of Class AA and Class A players whose selection was set aside on account of number:

From Los Angeles—Lober, by Washington Americans; Daley, by St. Louis; New York; Chicago and Philadelphia Americans; Leverenz, by St. Louis and Detroit Americans; and Boston Nationals; Howard, by New York, Washington and Detroit Americans and Philadelphia Nationals.

Leverenz was declared subject to draft.

From Oakland—Mitze, by Cleveland; St. Louis and Detroit Americans and Boston Nationals; Patterson, by St. Louis and Chicago Americans and Boston and New York Nationals; Leard, by Chicago Nationals.

Patterson was declared subject to draft.

From Portland—Howley, by Philadelphia Nationals; Klawitter, by Detroit Americans.

Who'll Buy Ping
Bodie From Sox

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—Report has it that Manager Jimmy Callahan of the White Sox wants to sell Ping Bodie for cash. The Italian has not walloped the ball severely enough to suit Jeams and his base running and fielding have been lifeless as well as below par. Callahan, it is said, wants to get rid of the erstwhile fence buster for good so that he can spend the money for some young minor league pitcher. No more

PLOTTERS CAUSE OF DAVIS' FALL

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—The base lines of Fenway park are clean again after having been oiled principally to enable Heinie Wagner, shortstop of the Red Sox, to catch men off bases, according to a Boston sporting writer. He says that there was one oiled spot between second and third bases about 20 feet by 10, and another between first and second. The fastest base runners, such as Cobb and Milan, have been nailed off second by Wagner and the writer attributes this to the slippery spot. When the pennant apparently had been clinched the spots disappeared, the writer claims.

THOMPSON-M'GOORTY DRAW

CINCINNATI, Sept. 16.—Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, Wis., and "Cydonie" Johnny Thompson of Sycamore, Ill., fought 10 rounds to a draw here this evening. Thompson kept boring in throughout the fight but inflicted little damage, McGoorty covering up cleverly.

Toward the end of the bout, McGoorty showed a flash of ability by stopping Thompson's advance with right rights and a left to the face.

The bout was supposed to be 30 rounds, but through an error the men went an extra three minutes.

M'DONALD QUILTS GAME

BOSTON, Sept. 16.—Edward J. McDonald, third baseman of the Boston Nationals, notified today of his immediate release to the Sacramento, Cal., club, declared he would not go.

HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

Humors get into the blood usually because of an inactive condition of the system. Those members whose duty it is to expel all refuse matter do not properly perform their work, and an unhealthy accumulation is absorbed into the blood. Then instead of performing its natural function of nourishing the skin the circulation irritates and inflames it because of its impure condition. A thorough cleansing of the blood is the only certain cure for any skin disease; external applications can only give temporary relief. S. S. S. goes into the circulation and drives all humors from the blood, and in this way makes a permanent and complete cure in every form of skin trouble. S. S. S. supplies the blood with the nutritive qualities necessary to sustain the skin and preserve its natural texture and perfect appearance. S. S. S. cures Eczema, Acne, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and all other skin eruptions or diseases. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice free.

NO MORE EUROPE FOR M'GOY

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Not for Kid McCoy another fight on the European continent. The Kid has his fill and he said so yesterday in response to a cable message from Paris telling him that he could have four fights. The message was from Fred Calhoun in Paris and reads as follows:

"Have four matches—Carpentier, Moreau, Papke, Jeannette. Each match should average 20,000 to 40,000 francs your share. It's acceptable cube-me immediately and rely on me to look after your interests."

"Nothing doing," was McCoy's terse reply, who added that "Enough's enough, and I wouldn't go over there to fight or anything else again for love or money."

DRESSING TO SUIT THE WEATHER

From the New York Evening Sun.

New York may be the greatest summer resort in the country, as our hotel keepers are fond of remarking from time to time. But you never would guess it from the costumes of our male citizens.

Look about you in the next oven, masquerading as a subway car, that you enter. The sensible expert in pongee or silk mohair looks like a visitor from an insane asylum. He may be comparatively cool and comfortable. But his fluidic brothers view him with suspicion, hatred and alarm. "Here is a man dressed as if it was really hot," they seem to say (mop, mop). "Why can't he wear wool like a sensible person?"

This contrast is as old as the town, we believe. Probably the original Dutch viewed the original Indians in the same captious spirit. New York has always had the climate of Naples in summer and the climate of Greenland in winter. If the records are to be believed, yet only a few rare, brave spirits have ever had the courage to look the facts in the face. We once knew a man who, with other togs, wore a pith helmet on Wall street. He was an expert who had learned in India and knew the real thing when he met it on Broadway.

Probably he was mobbed as were the suffragettes. At any rate, he has disappeared, and with him one of the few hopeless endeavors to convert our town from its midsummer madness.

Over against the sweltering idleness in his Turkish bath costume it is but just to set our sensible and charming women. In their case and present garb, sense could hardly go further. Whence flows fresh proof of where the reason of our nation dwells.

Bob Hodges has a new catcher for the Browns next year in the person of Crossin of Binghamton. He has been a mighty good backstop for the New York State league team, and will work with the St. Louis aggregation for a while in the fall.

Harry Kause hasn't won a game since he quit the association, joined the American league, and was returned to the association. He had not lost a game this year up to the time he was taken from Toledo by Cleveland. He lost, while he was with the Naps and after he had been sent back, however.
